It is important to recognize that psychoanalysis, or what Joseph Breuer's patient Anna O, termed 'Talking Cure', actually comprises of numerous elements that are not speech-based. In his talk, Dr. Akhtar will speak about the five nonverbal communications in the session that are important for delving into the unconscious. The five realms of nonverbal communications, broadly classified by him are as follows:

- (a) Psychostructural
- (b) Formal
- (c) Patient-originated
- (d) Analyst- originated
- (e) Simultaneously occurring.

Dr Akhtar will attend to awareness of these nonverbal elements and facilitate understanding about their theoretical origins, manifestations, use, and consequences, which greatly enrich psychoanalytic clinical work.
